

GREETINGS FROM COOLIDGE SCHOOL

April 7, 2015

www.shrewsbury-ma.gov/schools/coolidge

Dear Families,

As you know, we have committed as a faculty to recognizing effective effort. At all school meetings and in individual classrooms we talk about the importance of working hard, and we share examples of famous people and their continuous efforts. Importantly, we talk about the value of failure. We try to get students to see mistakes as learning opportunities rather than reasons to stop trying.

I hope yesterday you had the opportunity to review your child's effort grade on the report card. As promised, here is the list of all the children at Coolidge that earned a 'consistent' mark on their report card for effort this trimester. If your child is recognized for effort, please continue the celebration at home:

Note that students with asterisks demonstrated consistent effort in both Trimester 1 and Trimester 2- these children should be applauded for maintaining effort over time. Children without an asterisk should be celebrated for growth- they did not earn a ‘consistent’ last trimester, but have stepped up their level of work since then.

Finally, if your child is not on the list yet, please:

- read the teacher comments for clues about how your child can improve,
- set an effort goal with your child for trimester 3, and
- reach out to your child’s teacher to learn more about how you can support your child.

Elementary school is a good place to learn and to grow. I am struck by how many Kindergarten students seem to know this already, and I am hopeful they’ll remain engaged. Please support our efforts and join the conversation about how to engage your child in demonstrating a positive mindset at school.

Sincerely,

Amy
