

THE FALCON FLYER

January 24, 2011

Dear Floral Street School Families,

For those Floral Street families who are new to New England, who perhaps moved from a warmer climate like Florida or New Delhi – no, the winters aren't all this bad...

Snow and really cold weather reminds us of all the little things that people do to make Floral Street School work. Early this morning, with temperatures still locked well below zero, members of the Floral Street staff took to important duties like monitoring parent drop-off and pickup, accompanying walkers, directing traffic, and supervising children coming off of busses. They'll do these things again this afternoon when the temperature is likely to still be in the single digits, just as they do on the days when April brings a beautiful warm spring breeze – or a torrential downpour. They do them every day, mostly anonymously and without complaint, because they know how important these "little things" are.

We also know, as administrators and parents ourselves, that you do a lot of little things behind the scenes to help your children arrive at school ready to learn – thank you for your consistent efforts and support.
